Hello sweetheart

Another day and I'm still not feeling so well, but I'm feeling fine in the last hour. I went down to the medics today to get something for my headache. It was around four o'clock that I took the pills and now three hours later I feel as if I never was sick.

The way I felt earlier in the day I never expected to be able to write you today but luckily and glad I am to be able to write you a few words.

Back home I'll probably have some good hot tea with lemon and you to nurse me, so I'll be recovered in a few days or over two. I have to be contented the way things are.

I have my doubts if my upset stomach and headache was caused by the beef hash potatoes I ate the other day because quite a few other fellows seem to have the same illness as I had. It must have been the food we had at one of the meals.

Can't complain of the food that we receive because it's good. I'm getting about the same type meal as I always use on receiving in the Army. Naturally the meals can't compare to a home cooked meal but considering that the kitchen the cooks have it here and the messes from they cook for it well it's alright. I've been looking steady and throwing in more fresh fried potatoes. But that's must be decreasing.

I better tell you my health again so looking I'll sign off until tomorrow with all my love and hugs.

Pat
