My Beloved Judy

No mail from you today but I guess I can't complain in the least after receiving so many letters.

Write my buddy a long explanation explaining about my requests and desire to receive only that only one package a week be sent home. I also explained in detail about the items to send me, include the heading of the request that I make unless I write differently. I listed four indirect items and I'll also give them to you. This doesn't mean I want you to send me the package immediately, as I believe I already explained to you.

Better, include requests in my next letter - OK.

You see yesterday or before I asked for stationery but today I got half of a writing pad that will last me for weeks. That's why I don't like to ask for things besides chocolate, candy. I still need the envelopes.

Haven't read my book "The Seventh Cross" yet but I expect to read within a few days. I lent the book to somebody else because I happen to be reading something else at the time.

Wish I received some of those packages that on chee way I already have that taste of Bacter's chocolates in my mouth. Is it difficult to buy those chocolates?

That's about all for today darling, so with all my love & kisses

Pat Dan
