Hello my Darling.

Today I said au revoir to Robert and Andre and they said, good by to me. I thanked them for everything and they invited me to return to see them if I even have the opportunity or get a few days leave. Now a leave appear far fetched but in the future if we get one I'll like to travel back to visit Robert and Andre because I feel I would have a enjoyable time rather than entering a strange environment where the people wouldn't understand me or me them. Possible my intensions, will change but the whole idea remains to be seen.

No mail from you today dear, but another letter from Julie Wohlfeld in which he sends his best regards to you. Julie seems to like France better than his stay in England, even though as he writes, the towns are also off limits to him. I can't understand his preference because in my opinion speaking the same language as the civilians in the country is a advantage as you can ask questions, have conversations and understand them.

The jar of herring enclosed in your package was much better than I even expected, and I enjoyed it. The chocolate cookies went swell with the cocoa. The noodle soup I have. I had get but I know it will be delicious. The bracelet is on my wrist to remain and I hope I don't have another tragedy as I did with the last one. Will be more careful. It all sums up, to. I'll again want to thank you so very much for the package and especially for the bracelet. Those three engraved words on the back of the bracelet, I know you mean it with all your heart, and during the period since I lost the first one and until I received the present one I missed glancing at those engraved words.

Received and finished reading the book Mr Mike sent me titled "A Bell for Aclans" Have you read it? If you would like to read any of the books my brother sends me don't hesitate to ask him for the book before he sends it to me. It's a very light story, interesting and the type I enjoy since, the author goes away with those long descriptions.

I could actually kick myself in the — for being so one track minded in thinking that the majority of so stories I've been reading is general true with the negativity of people in normal life but now I realize how incorrect I <sup>was</sup> am. I'm mainly referring to stories of love complications. I realize now that, that's what makes a novel interesting. Perhaps that had something to do with the letter I've written you a few days ago.

Unless you write me differently I'm aware that our hearts are glued together and I love you tremendously and miss you desperately. Yours truly,
