AMERICAN RED CROSS

Thurs day
Nov 2, 1944

My Beloved Sweetheart,

Here it is another day another time on the swing shift without any swing, and another few enchanting moments of writing you dearest.

Remember the story I once wrote you last year back in Italy about listening to radio programs over the telephone receiver, well that still applies over here but later I haven't been doing it as often as I did back in Italy.

Hope you don't mind this Red Cross stationary because at present it's the only half way decent kind I have to use.

Ray and I have intentions of writing Robert and Andre tomorrow. Even if we return tomorrow, we may be disappointed & since Robert and Anthe aren't aware we are coming therefore they may not be home. Even if they aren't our trip won't be in vain because once back to their town I believe I'll be able to buy the French kind of stationary I've sent you in the past, plus the fact I may be able to obtain from Roberts father the snap shots Robert took of us. It's not definite that Ray and I will go there tomorrow as some thing may pop, thus preventing us from going. Let you know tomorrow dear?

When writing you once darling, of all the different things that daily have me think and dream about you there was one phase of it that I overlooked.

Hardly a day passes and without your name being mentioned by one of the fellows. You see honey, every one in my section knows you clearly and calls you Judy in one type of discussion or another. For example, when one of the stranger fellows comes around the switchboard and notices a picture of a beautiful girl in a frame above the switchboard he natural as his whats this, before I have a chance to say its my girl friend one of the other fellows would remark Why thats Judy, dont you know her? Then whenever I pass out candy, the fellows would remark, "you know Ben, Judy is really on the wall" or "Ha, candy from Judy."

Then there are other times when I say or do something and the boys would remark, Now what would Judy think or what would Judy say, you see honey, he says no longer know you as a total stranger, as they would say my girlfriend this is not in fact of my girl friend this way and like Tom July. I like this way and like Tom to know also I got the best girl waiting for my return

On the way your pictures receive many fine compliments, and the way of your compare you with the beautiful looking pin up girls in magazines and newspapers we get and really change our views of them. I

Their wasn't any mail from you today but its not in despair that I'm looking forward to tomorrow in getting a letter from you soon.

That's all the news for today, as I'm finishing the day, cut it up doing so, my day wasn't the comp life without just giving you a a long embrace like this and telling you darling you mean every thing to me. I love you so tremendously.
 I get right thinking, pleasant dreams and sleep well.
