Hello My Darling,

Monday
Oct 12th 1945

Here I am back in camp, after spending a very nice day in Paris, and never regretting that I went even though it was a long trip. It takes three and one half hours each way, now I can understand why it's so expensive for a $4 when we go to Paris on a three day pass.

I went around town with another fellow from my company by the name of George, we ate in a French restaurant, drank wine and beer, and the prices are outrageous, but since I was in for a one day spree I didn't care.

All of the department stores were closed darling but I did manage to buy you a little something from the PX which I mailed to you from the ARC. I bought another gift but I prefer to take that home with me when mail it, I would have bought more gifts but the gifts are rationed too far now on a ration card.

I sold my camera for the reasonable sum of two hundred dollars, my main reason for selling the
